HISTORIC BOOK TOWER

Book Tower, located at 1265 Washington Boulevard, was designed by architect Louis Kamper and built by the Book Brothers in 1926. It was the tallest building in Detroit until 1928 and has 14 floors in the main building and 38 floors in the tower. After being closed in 2009, it was purchased by Bedrock in 2015 and reopened Summer 2023 after extensive renovations.

BOOK TOWER ENTRANCE

A conservatory dining room with a high ceiling featuring a dark metal truss system and large skylights. The room is filled with round tables covered in white cloths, each surrounded by wooden chairs with cane backs. The tables are elegantly set with white plates, glassware, and silverware. Centerpieces of white and yellow flowers are placed on each table. Large windows with dark frames and green curtains offer a view of a city skyline. A long planter box filled with various green plants sits along the windowsill. Several large, modern chandeliers with multiple glass shades hang from the ceiling. A projector is mounted on a track in the center of the room. The floor is made of light-colored wood in a herringbone pattern. The word "Conservatory" is written in a large, white, serif font across the middle of the image.

The Conservatory

The Conservatory Ballroom, on the 13th floor of the Book Building, has 2,700 square feet of bright and beautiful event space that can accommodate 200 seated or 275 for a strolling reception. Rich wood paneling, limestone floors, and warm plaster set the stage for an opulent event.

Behind them is a long, dark wooden bar with a glass-fronted upper section displaying various glassware. The bar is flanked by two spherical pendant lamps and two table lamps with white shades. The background features a wall of dark wood paneling. The overall atmosphere is warm and elegant, with soft lighting and a mix of textures.
